PRAYER OF A MOTHER FOR HER SONS IN SERVICE

Dear Father, he with me this lonely night. For in my dreams I see their faces and feel their arms around me, and when I awake I live over all the hours of their childhood and until they went away. I have given much, Father. I have given the hands that have held my dear since you gave them to me. I have given the hearts that beat with my heart as one. These I have given. But I have loved enough to let them go. The slow weeks pass. Father, and I am lonely—lonely. Dear Lord, be a messenger to them through all the miles that lie between us. Tell them I walk among the remembered things, that I have given the hearts that beat with my heart as one. These I have given. But I have loved enough to let them go. The slow weeks pass. Father, and I am lonely—lonely. Dear Lord, be a messenger to them through all the miles that lie between us. Tell them I walk among the remembered things, that I have given the hearts that beat with my heart as one. These I have given. But I have loved enough to let them go. The slow weeks pass. Father, and I am lonely—lonely. Dear Lord, be a messenger to them through all the miles that lie between us. Tell them I walk among the remembered things, that I have given the hearts that beat with my heart as one. These I have given. But I have loved enough to let them go. The slow weeks pass. Father, and I am lonely—lonely. Dear Lord, be a messenger to them through all the miles that lie between us. Tell them I walk among the remembered things, that I have given the hearts that beat with my heart as one. These I have given. But I have loved enough to let them go. The slow weeks pass.
